

Information professionals are in demand in every sector of our society.

Our graduates are qualified to fill every conceivable role on the information spectrum - as library directors, knowledge managers, information architects, children's librarians, competitive research strategists, law librarians, health informatics experts, digital preservationists, usability analysts, museum collection specialists, network consultants and more- and even some roles that haven't been reached yet.

Scholarships are available

School of Information iSeed Scholarship

- $1000 scholarship
- for students who are from underrepresented groups and/or are veterans
- enrolled in the first semester of their MLIS program.

American Library Association-Accredited Master of Library and Information Science offers 14 specializations:

- Academic Librarianship
- Archival or Special Collections Librarianship
- Cataloging or Metadata
- Digital Librarianship / Digital Initiatives
- Digital Preservation
- Information Technology and Information Science
- K-12 School Librarianship (concentration)
- Library Management
- Museum Studies
- Public Librarianship
- Reference Librarianship
- Special Librarianship
- Children's Librarianship
- Teen Librarianship